After paying all the bills of the big tercentenary celebration, there is $12,500 left out of the legislative appropriation for the monument to Champlain. This looks as though there was some pretty good financiering on the part of the commission.

One brother, Elroy Kent, awaiting execution for one of the most heinous murders in the criminal history of New England, another brother, Fred Kent, under indictment for killing his own father with an ell spear and concealing the body in a ravine. Here is a double illustration of depravity, degeneracy, or whatever you may care to call it, that might well receive some of the attention and effort that is being directed toward the building of colleges in Armenia and hospitals in China.
